International Trade
The Trade Marks (International Registration) Order 1995

This Order gives effect in the United Kingdom to the Protocol relating to the Madrid Agreement concerning the International Registration of Marks adopted at Madrid on 27th June 1996 ("the Madrid Protocol") which the United Kingdom ratified on 8th April 1996. The arrangements made under the Madrid Protocol become effective on the 1st April 1996 and the Order comes into force on that date.

The Trade Marks (International Registration) Order 2008

This Order modernises and replaces The Trade Marks (International Registration) Order 1995 (S.I. 1996 No 716 as amended) ("the Order"). The Order is made under powers conferred by section 52 of the Trade Marks Act 1994 ("TMA"). It gives effect in the UK to the provisions of the Madrid Protocol, which is the system by which trade marks can be registered internationally and subsequently protected in the holder's choice of designated sales or territories.

2. Comparative Advantage of Value-Added Services: The Case of South Africa.

By: Grillot, S. (2014). Managing Global Transitions: International Research Journal, Fall 2014, Vol. 12 Issue 3, (PDF) 107p. Abstract: Global supply chains have changed the way in which products are produced internationally. The inputs into a final product include both intermediate goods and services, which adds value to the final product. Global trade data is misleading and includes some double counting. This study questions whether traditional methods used for intermediate services (ICA) calculations for gross exports of services would offer different results from value-added services. ICA calculation was done for South Africa and the SADC countries for both gross and value-added exports. The analysis showed that some countries performed stronger in terms of gross exports than in value-added terms; for some sectors, but others showed higher comparative advantage in value-added terms. For South Africa, most services had a higher comparative advantage in terms of value added than gross exports. Results indicated the importance of including value-added data in international trade data analysis. [ABSTRACT FROM AUTHOR] (PDF) 100561983

3. Adaptive governance of Cape mountain zebra, can it work?

By: Van Riel, Peter; Biers, Corné; Cowell, Carly; Kerley, Graham I. H.; Pelice, Deon; Pob, Michele; Schlaw, Joanna; Zimmerman, David. South African Journal of Wildlife Research, Oct 2017, Vol. 47 Issue 2, p. 379-391. 13p. 1 Chart. Abstract: Adaptive governance and network governance theory provide a useful conceptual framework to guide the conservation of threatened species in complex multi-sector, multi-jurisdictional social-ecological systems. We use principles from this theory to assess strengths and weaknesses in (1) national legislation, and (2) the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES) Regulations applicable to the conservation of the Cape mountain zebra (Equus zebra zebra) (CMZ) in South Africa. A collaborative conservation tool, Biodiversity Management Plans for Species (BMPs), establishes a network of people in roles and facilitates the important principles of collaborative learning and adaptation. Effective governance of this network is critical to success, but challenging because of the mandate gap and limited capacity in government to provide essential network-level competencies. National regulations governing human use of CITES (Threatened or Protected Species (TOPS) Regulations) are in line with the principles of (1) being developed in consultation with stakeholders and (2) open to revision and adaptation. CITES Regulations also provide adequately for adaptation. Poor alignment of regulations between different regulatory authorities in South Africa and limited capacity for implementation of regulations seriously constrain learning and adaptation. 1. The Impact of Economic Shocks in the Rest of the World on South Africa: Evidence from a Global VAR.

   By: De Waal, Anri; van Eyden, Robed. Emerging Markets Finance & Trade, 2016, Vol. 52 Issue 3, p567-573. 17p. Abstract: The substantial change in South Africa's trade patterns over the past two decades has affected the impact of economic shocks in major world economies on South Africa. To investigate this, we use a global vector autoregression (VAR) model with time-varying trade weights to account for changing international trade linkages. We show that the long-term impact of a shock to Chinese GDP on South African GDP is much stronger in 2009 than in 1996, due to the substantial increase in South Africa's trade with China since the mid-1990s. At the same time, the importance of the U.S. economy to South Africa diminished considerably. The results indicate one of the possible reasons why the recent global crises did not affect South Africa as much as it affected developed economies. It also stresses the increased risk to the South African and other economies, should China experience slower GDP growth. (ABSTRACT FROM AUTHOR) DOI: 10.1016/j.emft.2015.10.010. (AN: 12814920)

2. China, US trade war to cost South Africa jobs: New tariffs imposed by US president Donald Trump in the trade war between the US and China could result in thousands of job losses in the steel and aluminium industries.

   By: Fabusola, Peter. Finweek, 5/10/2018, p6-8. 1p. Abstract: The article offers information about the impact of the trade war between China and the United States on South Africa's economy. It expects thousands of job losses or unemployment in the steel and aluminium industries in the country as U.S. President Donald Trump imposed new tariffs on imports as well as commercial products. 3. INFLATION AND ECONOMIC GROWTH IN SOUTH AFRICA: AN EMPIRICAL INVESTIGATION.

   By: OCHIAMBIO, NICOLAS M. Economics, Management & Financial Markets. Dec2010, Vol. 8 Issue 4, p27-41. 10p. 5 Charts, 2 Graphs. Abstract: This study examines the nexus between inflation dynamics and economic growth in South Africa. Specifically, the study aims to assess whether the inflation Granger causes economic growth in South Africa. In order to address the problem of omitted variable bias associated with some previous studies, the study incorporates the employment as a third (intermittently) variable affecting both inflation and economic growth - thereby creating a triatomic causality model. Using the recently developed ARDL bounds testing approach, the study finds that there is a bidirectional causal relationship between inflation and economic growth in South Africa. The results apply irrespective of whether the causality model is estimated in the short run or in the long run. Other results show that there is a primary feedback causal flow from economic growth to employment in South Africa. (ABSTRACT FROM AUTHOR) DOI: 10.13140/RG.2.2.1702.6432.1

Search help

Exact match supported for author search results
You can perform an exact author search by enclosing the name (first and/or last) of the author in quotation marks.

Boolean operators
The Boolean operators AND, OR, and NOT can be applied to search terms.

AND (also * or &)
Use AND to search for documents containing two or more terms. For example, the following query returns documents containing both cat and dog:
cat AND dog
The AND operator is applied by default; for example cat AND dog produces the same results as cat dog.

OR
Use OR to search for documents containing at least one of two or more terms. For example, the following query returns documents containing cat, dog, and documents containing cat and dog:
cat OR dog

NOT
Use NOT to search for documents that do not contain a given term. For example, the following query returns documents containing cat but not dog:
cat NOT dog
